BUY PENINSULA CAMPAIGN INTENSIFIED. Oscor Balzer, chairman of a group of business leaders who have banded together to make shopping at home more simple, convenient and satisfying for Peninsula residents, is shown above as he displays one of the placards being distributed to stores. Mr. Baizer declares: "A great deal of thought and care have been given this program by merchants of all the communities of the Peninsula to obtain superior lines of stylish, appealing, durable and priced-right merchandise for the convenience of our

HAVE YOU BROKEN YOUR AXLE? Judging from reports reaching us, just about everybody in town is getting ready to sue the City of amel-By-The-Sea because of the chuck hales - or bomb craters -on Fifth and on Dolores on the way to the Post Office. As you have to go to the Post Office If you want your mail (this explanation for aut-of-town readers) practically everyone has seen the mess which is really disgraceful.

The city says the property awners along these streets will have to pay $40 a lot to put in a permanent, street surface. Most of the owners have agreed to this, and have put up their money. A few have still to come through, and the Council has unofficially given them a week In which to do so, or proceedings will be instituted to force them to. As it would then cost the recalcitrant owners more money, it is expected that arrangements will be concluded immediately. In the mean-time, the city half-way repaired the worst of the holes on Wednesday, but by Thursday morning they were almost as bad as before.

AMONG THE DIGNITARIES at the Hospitality Ball in the Soldiers' Club last Saturday night were (left to right) Edward W. Cochrone, publicity chairman; Major General Robert T. Frederick, hast for the occasion; Lieutenant Colonel A. F. Solomon, member of the Hospitality Ball committee, and Wilma Campbell, chairman of the committee Dancing to a 6th Infantry Division band and a stage show made up the evening's entertainment. Last reports show that the 1100 people who attended the ball made it a financial successmand now the Armed Forces YMCA will be able to carry out its plans for Christmas entertainment of the Armed Forces. Other windows will close as usual at 5 o' clack week days and 12 noon Sat-urdays. Bill Woolsey will be stationed in the lobby as usual to receive packages. It is hoped that he will repeat his stunt of last year--wearing different costumes and beards. It made the waiting equier.

On Monday, December 11, the Post Office Annex in the old Telephone Building at the corner of Dolores and Seventh will be open from 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. daily except Sundays. Robert Miller will be in charge

Boxholders who receive notices of packages too large for their boxes will pick them up at the annex.

Carmel Waman's Qub Welcomes New Members

Combining a musical program and tea welcoming 36 new members, the Carmel Woman's Club enjoyed a well attended meeting Monday, December 4. Mrs. F. E. Vaughan thanked Mrs. Helen Clark Cranston for the Christmas decorations.

Mrs. W. C. Peterson, chairman of the card section, spoke of the Christmas party which will be given by the card section on December 11, from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Gladys Steele, well-known diseuse, delighted the group with her monologues, and Carl Hague, Norwegian tenor, enter-tained with Norwegian songs and Christmas numbers.

After the Christmas party on December 11, the next meeting of the club, on January 8, 1951, will feature Kent Roberts in his address: "The World is Looking

Navy Wins And So Does Lt. Bill Mann

Last Friday a Navy publication, LINEWS, published at the Navy General Line School in Monterey, was distributed to personnel at the school...just as it is every week. What caused quite a ripple at the school was not just the publication-but a football forecast contained in it written by one of the students, Lieutenant William Mann. The forecast concerned the Army-Navy game to be played the next day which most people including lots of the Navy, figured as an easy victory for Army.

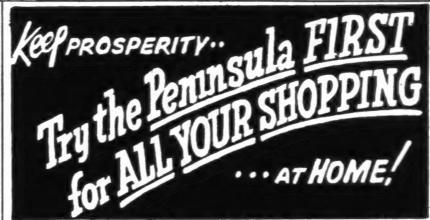

Herewith the forecast (Oak Knoll is the Navy mental hospital near Oakland):

"A fever has hit Philadelphia this week. It's an annual fever which comes with the Army-Navy game. Odds highly favor the Army, but I'll make my last bid for a bed at Oak Knoll. Army has played an easy schedule with two soft touches between each of three hard games. Incidentally, they have won them all. Navy on the other hand has not had an easy game all year. The schedule maker at Apnapolis must be left over from the era of wooden ships and IRON MEN. He thinks of the middies as Iron Men and arranges a schedule to test that species of mankind. Army will be ready to show the world its might while Navy is being crushed. The Middies have learned a lot under a new coach and will undoubtedly pull the cork. With this in mind, my most featless prediction is Navy over Army in the upset of year. Oak Knoll, here I come.

With a 14 to 2 victory for Navy, Lieutenant, you won't need that bed..., and you can forecast for The SPECTATOR any time you wish.

SATURDAY MADNESS

By Chuck Wilmarth

I like to play a little tennis or fish a bit of a Sunday, and I occasionally find time to show my friends what a real clown can do with a nine-iron in a sand trap. But for pure pleasure, I have always leaned toward football.

Not that I ever played on my college teams or even on the high school scrubs. I admit quite candidly that I reached the peak of my playing career on a sand-lot back in New York.

That's why I know so much about the game--I'm a spectator. I've had some of the best seats in the stadia and bleachers of every school I've ever attended. And that's plenty, because my family moved a lot.

So football is my game. At least it was until a couple of Saturdays ago. That was the day I took a very attractive seven-year-old friend to a Stanford game.

She has lived in British Columbia and, consequently, had never seen a football game. As an expert I decided to introduce her to the mystery of the "T" formation.

Off we went, gaily laughing. We arrived just as the teams rushed out of the tunnel onto the field and commenced their flashy ritual of calisthenics.

"What are those men doing?" inquired my diminutive guest after admiring the size of the stadium.

"Calisthenics," I answered importantly, happy to detect interest at this early stage.

"They look funny," she returned cooly. "Why do they jump around that way?"

I had to admit I couldn't tell why some hundred prime specimens of brawn with muscles hardened to steely springiness should think it necessary to do push-ups all over the field two minutes before the kickoff. I had to admit it and I did.

Presently the teams lined up. The ball was put in place, and the stands were tense. The whistle blew. The ball arched downfield. The safety man caught it, made a short runback and was tackled. We sat down, my date and I.

"Now," I began brightly, "you will see something. Notice the ball down there between the two lines of men? The men in the white sweaters want to pick it up and carry it down the field. They want to carry it over that last line in front of the big white frame."

I was keeping it simple and feeling very proud of my way with children. And me, a bachelor!

"Why do they want to do that?" asked the Small Voice.
"Well, because they get six points for doing that. And the team with the most points wins the game."
"What's a team?"

"A team is...well, just a bunch of eleven men. But never mind that," I went on. "The game's what counts. Now, the other team-uh-bunch of men---"

"Do they always have to have eleven men?" I caught myself twisting uncomfortably, but not much, mind

you. I am very patient.

"Well, no," I said. "No, it just so happens that a new rule lets them have less than eleven men if they want. But-now listen--that other bunch--the ones in the red sweaters--want to keep them from taking the ball down the field. So they tackle them when they run with it."

Appealing blue eyes under blonde bangs, again the ingenu-

Appealing blue eyes under blonde bangs. .. again the ingenuous smile, and the Small Voice spoke--this time with that mastery of the monosyllable possessed only by children and women of cunning. Now that is a word which, when uttered by any female, no matter what her age, strikes man with terror. That was the point where I knew I was fighting a losing battle. And the amused smiles of people around us emphasized the fact. This masterpupil routine was getting more of their attention than the game. But-besides my patience, I also possess tenacity. I tried. "Well, just because that's the game, you see. Because the red-sweaters want to keep the white-sweatered bunch from getting any points, and because pretty soon they will get the ball and run with it and get points and maybe win the game."

Then I shuddered just a little when I thought she might ask

Then I shuddered just a little when I thought she might ask how the red-sweaters got the ball. That would leave me with the grisly prospect of trying to explain the system of downs and penalties.

As this panic seized me, I caught sight of the pop corn butcher and I croaked loudly for two sacks. Leaning across the woman next to me, I clutched nervously for the fluffy stuff, jabbing my elbow into her eye. Under the menacing stare of her moose of a husband, I meekly paid for the spilled corn and bought two more sacks. The Small Voice, eating happily, was quiet. My pop corn wasn't salted enough.

If you want to get an idea of what I went through in the second, third and fourth quarters -- between more popcorn, ice cream and soft drinks -- just try explaining Planck's quantum theory to a second-grader some day, providing you understand the quantum theory of course the quantum theory, of course.

un trying to keep simple my answers to the Small Voice's queries, I made this game of college football sound as preposterous a sport as hunting orchids in the Yukon. Here was I, expert and said as the college football sound as I. expert and said as the college football sound as I. expert and said as the college football sound as I. expert and said as the college football sound as I. expert as pert and avid fan, beginning to feel like Andrew White, one-time president of Cornell, who insisted football was nothing more than twenty-two men agitating an inflated pig's bladder on several acres of rich farm land.

Sipping was my love of the game and growing my contempt for fifty thousand people who would spend an entire afternoon urging, with shouts, those twenty-two absurdly costumed gladiators to acts of mayhem.

I was morose, and when, finally, the game was over, both my date and I left the stadium not knowing or caring who had won. My petite, golden-haired friend, simply because she never had cared. I, because something had gone out of my life.

So, I'm off football, and I don't know what I'll do next year on those wonderful Setunday offernous in action.

on those wonderful Saturday afternoons in autumn. Go fishing, I guess. Will I take the Small Voice along? Probably. You see, she's never been deep-sea fishing, and I want to show her how

The Banshees Give "Our Jimmy" The Lady

A thousand members and guests of The Panshees, New York's famous luncheon club, gathered recently in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to pay honor to genial Jimmy Hatlo, cartoonist creator of 'They'll Do It Every Time," who received 'The Lady' for 1950,

"The Lady" corresponds roughly to the movies' "Oscar" and is a silver statuette de-signed by Willy Pogany, pre-sented annually to the artist or writer considered the year's outstanding personage in the newspaper field. It has been won already by Walt Disney, Chic Young and Arthur "Bugs"

Hatlo made a special trip from his home in Carmel to receive the award. His work, syndicated by King Features, appears internationally in more than 700 newspapers.

An elaborate program of entertainment was arranged for the luncheon, headed by Imogene Coca and Sid Caesar, the television, stars, and several acts from the smash musical comedy "Guys and Dolls," television, stars, and several acts from the smash musical comedy "Guys and Dolls," in-cluding Vivien Blaine and the "Take Back Your Mink" chorus

THE BEAUTY OF TIE SILK -- little holiday dresses -- in THE COLLEGIATE DRESS SHOP in Monterey caught my eye. The blue and red geometric designs in the fabric are on red, green or brown sackgrounds, and the calor effect is of a formal garden, such as that seen in Persian rugs. These prints are of two styles. One has short sleaves and a cute vest of white waffle pique, and the other has three-quarter length sleaves and a hug-me-tight collar with a double edging of black velvet. Silvered pine cones with little birds and condle holders, decorated candles, cone shape tinsel Christmas trees, painted waeds (silver, gold and the palest of pink), plastic angels which look as if they are coved out of crisp hard snow, tinsel snow flakes in all colors, permanent Espaller trees, bells, helly, caramic fruit, helly candlesticks and ribbons... are some of the unusually designed emblems of the Yuletide. MRS. NIELSON'S N. B. DENSLOWS CARMEL BY THE SEA CALLE

There are no duds here

The Army's realistic training of draftees and recruits is exemplified in the pictures to the left, taken by Sergeant Peter Schwartz at the Fort Ord infiltration course. Trained under the so-called "Faculty System," which has the men receiving their instruction from the Sixth Infantry Division stationed permanently at Fort Ord, rather than from their company officers, the soldiers are used to live ammunition firing at close quarters. Picture captions are:

(UPPER LEFT): A machine gunner prepares to fire bursts of live ammunition over heads of trainees at Fort Ord's realistic infiltration course. The guns are blocked so the muzzles cannot be depressed accidentally. This does not detract at all, however, from the course's realism. Trainees who have completed the course, as well as World War II combat veterans, are agreed that the zing of the bullets is authentic enough to suit them.

(LOWER LEFT): Half pound charges of TNT explode on the course. These are in pits and electrically discharged from the tower. The machine gunner in the foreground checks on his flank so that an even tempo of fising can be set up over the course. Trainees are given an unlimited time to complete the course, but with the charges of TNT and bullets zipping overhead, few trainees spend unnecessary time on the course.

(UPPER RIGHT): Crawling out of the finishing trench, these two trainees illustrate the stamina required. The men crawl toward the machine gunner through the length of the course. The gunner can be seen in the background as he fires over the men's heads.

(LOWER RIGHT): Washing up after a dusty crawl through the course, these men relax and discuss the day's activities. Troops make one "dry run" on the course, then go through under live firing during daylight and again at night.

PHIVATE KUSTER REPORTS

The SPECTATOR heard the other day from another Carmelite in the Armed Forces. With this note we are starting a policy of publishing the mailing addresses of the men and women from this area who have been in the Armed Forces for some time and also of those who are just going into the service. The SPECTATOR is instituting this policy, believing that readers will wish to know where their service personnel are stationed and perhaps drop them a line. Your editor knows from experience what it means to hear from friends when serving away from home.

New address received this week is that of Pvt. Colin E. Kuster, Squadron 3736, Flight 6260, Lackland Air Base, San Antonio, Texas. If our readers know of other addresses, please send them to The SPECTATOR, Box A-O, Carmel. Overseas addresses should contain APO numbers only.

Carmel Work Center Notes

By Carol Tindell

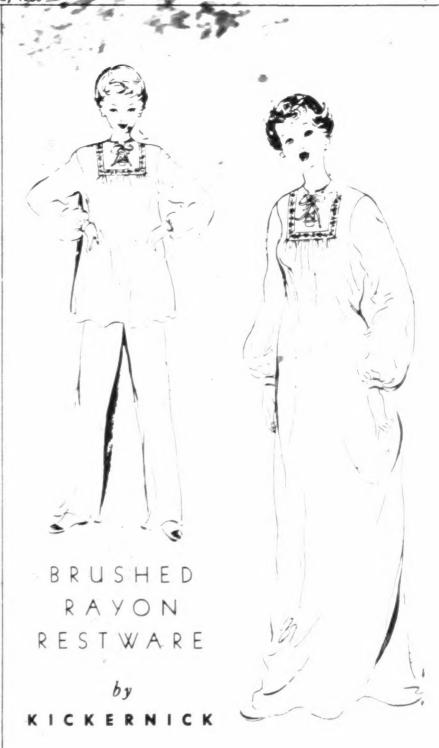

If you are stuck with your Christmas list we'll let you borrow some of our ideas. We have lots of smart little gifts for little money.

There are Duane Matterson's Egg Bakers, made of stoneware (can be put in the oven)....for only $1.25 each. Then there are glistening Snow Coasters which are wonderful for the holidays... they look so much like Christmas...and are six for $1.00. Joan Savo's cocktail napkins are another smart gift...$2.50 for a set of six. These are the cute little napkins with dogs and cats on them. Another good gift idea are Katherine Allen's colorful individual nut and mayonnaise bowls....and have you seen Harold Landaker's amusing ash trays and figures.

Milton Williams' Candelabras and Hurricane Lamps make very extra-special gifts. You can see Mr. Williams' work and paintings on exhibit at our shop in Pebble Beach.

Have you had any trouble finding us? Some friends asked the other day and when we told them they exclaimed, "Oh, where the telephone office used to be." So, if you haven't been in to see us yet, please do--we'd like to meet you.

Community Concert Great Musical Treat

programs offered us, seldom do we have the opportunity of hear-ing such a concert as the one given Friday evening, December 1, at the Pacific Grove High School Auditorium, under the auspices of the Monterey Peninsula Community Concert Assemble 1988 so ciation.

Ervin Laszlo, the guest artist, is a boy of only 19 years of age--undoubtedly one of the musical geniuses of this generation. Young as he is he has already scored extraordinary successes in New York and other parts of this country, as well as parts of this country, as well as having made his name known on Continent. He the European was born in Budapest, commenced the study of piano at the age of five, with his mother as his first teacher, won first prize at the Music Academy of Budspest at seven years old, made his debut on the concert platform when he was nine, and in his early teens won the Artist Diploma of the Academy of Music of Budapest and then first place in the International Competition at Geneva, where he was pitted against 424 entrants from 40 countries.

The program Friday evening was rich, classical and varied. The opening number was Bach's "Fantasy in C Minor," written originally for the organ, but lending itself to Laszlo's skilled and sensitive interpretion on the piece as if composition on the piece as if compositions. tion on the piano as if composed for the latter instrument. Needless to say, Bach is a composer for the musically adult. To play the muster's music as it was rendered at this concert was proof in itself that this musician--young as he is in years--is not only adult, but possesses the mind of a musical rendered.

His technique is remarkable. One could close one's eyes and believe he was listening to Rubenstein playing Chopin's treat to the Peninsula "Polonaise in A Flat Major," will be long remembered.

As rich as we are on the or "The Firebird," one of sev-Peninsula in the diversity of eral encores demanded by the entertainment and good musical enthusiasm of the audience.

Not only was the technique flawless but there was feeling interpretations.
"Auf Flugeln Lazlo's Mendelssohn's des Gesanges," for instance, was played with such charm and gracefulness its melodies sang themselves into one's ears. The sweetness and melodiousness of this rendering were the more remarkable because of their contrast to the virility and strikingly masculine power expressed in much of Laszlo's playing. His virtuosity was exhibited, too, in the ease and seeming effortlessness of his musical performance. Only inborn genius fortified by years musical of consecrated and concentrated practice could result in such perfect mastery of the piano.

In playing Beethoven's "Sonata in E Flat Major, Opus 31, No. 3," the boy's talent was best exemplified. Only exemplified. Only extraordinary musical sensitivity could so interpret the contrasting moods of this composition. From the brilliant Allegro to the light and fanciful Scherzo, on to the graceful Minu-etto, and the finale (Presto-con fuoco) -- in cascades of sound -this last movement demanding all the forcefulness and skill of technique a musician can command, Laszlo gave no mo-ment of disappointment. Every chord, every arpeggio, every note was perfect, the fingering flawless.

Despite his phenomenal ability, Laszlo is attractively modest and unassuming. He is tall and slight, sensitive-featured, red-cheeked, definitely boyish in appearance, with a natural dignity and no evidence of artists' affectations. He responded understandable pleasure to the obvious anthusiasm sure to the obvious enthusiasm of the audience and was gracious and generous with encores. The concert was a musical treat to the Peninsula which

Dr. Stuart of Stanford Honored At Dinner

A distinguished philosopher received a pleasant surprise last week for his 80th birthday.

Henry Waldgrave Stuart,

Henry Stanford University professor of philosophy emeritus, was pre-sented with a volume of letters written by 79 colleagues and former students.

Bound in a handsome redmorocco volume bearing the Stanford Seal, they were presented to the distinguished philosopher at an informal dinner at the Pine Inn, Carmel. Professor and Mrs. Stuart have resided in Carmel since his retirement.

Contributors to the volume include Dr. Wallace Sterling, president of Stanford; many prominent professional philosophers, including 11 who were Professor Stuart's students and who paid tribute to his influence in shaping their careers, and students from the first Stanford class to include philosophy graduates -the class of 1912-- to the class of 1936, the year of his retirement.

Professor Stuart received his bachelor's degree in 1893 from the University of California and the doctoral degree from the University of Chicago in 1900. He was called to Stanford in 1907 by David Starr Jordan to found a philosophy department; only occasional courses had been given in the subject previously. He headed this department until his retirement.

Presentation of the volume was made by John L. Mothershead, Stanford professor of philosophy, who told Ir. Stuart that it was but a token of the influence he exerted on hundreds of Stanford students during his 29 years of service.

The Carmel Padres broke even on a weekend cage bill last Friday and Saturday by taking the Gilroy tilt 34-25, after losing to Fremont of Sunnyville 37-25 the night before:

The Fremont Indians had too much on the ball for the green hardwood squad from Carmel, as they rang up point after point on accurate lay-ins. Bob Updike carried off the scoring honors for the Padres with ten digits.

Losing the opening night jitters, the Carmelites bounced back to chalk up 34 tallies and a victory over the Gilroy "Mus-tangs" in the Saturday night affair. This time it was Frans Doelman who won high-point glories, getting 11 counts to his credit.

Displaying the tallest team in recent years, the Carmel quintet might be headed places. Snaping up nicely this week in practice, they open the league season this Friday at Conzalesthe third of 24 scheduled games this year.

The Carmel lightweights hit the win column as they dropped the two initial contests of this season, 33-10, to the Fre-mont "Papooses," and 30-20 to Gilroy. All-CCAL candidate Butch Laugenour canned 12 points over the weekend to start off the right way. He won the Carmel scoring laurels for both contests.

Admission Requirements Lowered at

San Jose State College

Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey High School students who will be graduating in 1951 and who are planning to enter San Jose State College in March or September will find that the requirements for admission are less stringent than they have been in 1950. When they have been in 1950, when the college enrollment ex-ceeded 8,000 in 1949, admis-sion requirements were raised in an effort to reduce the en-rollment in the State College to the 6,000 limit imposed by the State Department of Education.

Graduation of a large number of veterans in March and June of 1950 and the current military situation which is resulting in the withdrawal from college of the withdrawal from college of many students are reasons given for revising the admission requirements.

High school graduates may qualify for admission to San Jose State College if they earned four or more academic units in their sophomore, junior or senior years with A or B grades. Those with six or more such units will be admitted in clear standing. Those with less than six such units will be admitted on probation.

Our "Who Is It" this week is Edward W. Cochrane, national ly known newspaper man, best known locally for his work as managing director of the Monterey Centennial.

Mr. Cochrane was born in Rome, Michigan. He has never outgrown his boyhood love of his home state, its beautiful lakes and acres of fruit or chards, its wealth of opportunity for the nature-lover and sportsman. His enthusiasm for fishing today dates back to early outings there in the middle West.

But wider fields soon called. After his college years and his first newspaper position in Kalamazoo, Mr. Cochrane heeded the advice "Go West, young man" and headed for Denver, Colorado. Thrilling experiences followed. He worked with a detective agency, rode down into Mexico checking land claims and stakes, and then returned to newspaper work (always his first love) -- this time for the Denver police department, though during most of his newspaper career, sports were the backbone of his work. Along the way he sandwiched in some football and some pro baseball. Finally, he accepted the position of sports editor of the Kansas City Journal, in Kansas City, Missouri, with which be continued for 25 years. In 1931 he married a Kansas City girl. Miss Roberta Martin. On their honeymoon the couple came here to the Peninsula, staying at the old Del Monte Hotel. Right from that time they planned ultimately to return here to make their home for, as with so many others, the Peninsula "got under their skin." But this possibility did not materialize until five years ago.

In the meantime Mr. Cochrane was not idle. As one project in his vereatile life, he was technical director and helped with the script for the play "Gentleman Jim," which starred Errol

After leaving Kansas City Mr. Cochrane joined the Hearst organization as sports editor of the Chicago Herald-American. The following year he was made director of all Hearst sports sections of 22 newspapers in New York and Chicago. Then he became sports director of International News Service and of the King Features Syndicate. After another five years he moved to New York, where he comminued in the same position, but after a year there he decided to retire while there was still time for him and Mrs. Cochrane to realize their dream of settling in Carmel. So, here, in 1945, they came to enjoy some years of well-earned retire-

Three years ago they built a home in Carmel. But Mr. Cochrane is of the breed of men who cannot vegetate. In 1947 he became managing director of the Monterey Centennial. Since, he has served as chairman of the USO Board of Management, of which organization he has been a member ever since coming to Carmel. He has also been invaluably active in the Red Cross Chapter, the Community Chest, and has worked on school bond drives, putting to great advantage, in each instance, his thorough knowledge of promotion.

Does such an extraordinarily busy person have time for hobbies? He loves both hunting and fishing, especially in the great Northwest, this area having replaced his original preference for the Middle West. And...he takes time to travel, having made trips into Canada, the far North, and only recently has returned from an extensive tour of Europe. Retired? Well, practically speaking. But idle, never.
